Foreword

OR the first time since the INDEX has made its annual appearance on the Aggie campus, it now comes forth as a true "college publication," made such by the vote of the student body, and accepted as such by the Non-Athletic Activities Board. Like our predecessors, we have striven to make our work representative of the M. A. C. we love, and, in addition, to make the College Administration glad that it has supported us. It is then with great pleasure that we send out to all those interested in this institution, its faculty, its alumni, and its undergraduates, the fifty-second volume of the INDEX.

dedicate our Index

Edward Morgan Lewis

SHOULD a college instructor or a college student carefully enumerate the qualities essential to a wholly successful college dean, he would place first the zest of youth, then moral courage, then educational vision. Many college deans have only one of these qualities, a few have two of them. Whoever knows Dean Lewis will not fail to say at once, "He has them all."

Dean Lewis comes of sturdy Welsh ancestors of that class that forms the sinew of Britain. He came to this country with his father and mother and two other children when he was only eight years old. The family settled in Utica, New York, largely by chance. By studying in night schools and clerking in drygoods stores he managed to go a long way toward preparation for college. An education was his dream and nothing could prevent the courageous and persistent youth from pushing on toward it. There was a scholarship for Welsh boys in a little college in Ohio. The boy got it. But in order to live he must find work. He clerked, carried mail, did anything that he could find to do. Up to this time the boy had never pitched a game of baseball. Some students noticed his great speed in throwing and insisted that he try to pitch a class game. He won the game and pitched the next summer for the town team. Money was easy now and he was soon able to enter Williams College.

At Williams his wonderful ability as a pitcher made his way comparatively easy. He interested himself in the Y. M. C. A. and in every uplifting influence in the college life. He was graduated as a scholar of high attainment in English, but he left Williams also as the chivalrous knight of athletics, honored and loved as a kind of Bayard, sans peur et sans reproche.

The insistent calls that had come to him to leave college and go into professional baseball he had put aside, but now the way was open. His career with the Boston Nationals from 1896 to 1901 is one of the most brilliant in baseball. In 1897, Ted Lewis was high pitcher of the league with a record of 25 victories out of 33 games played. He played in two world series. At the end of the 1901 season he could have had anything he would have asked for in baseball. However, in the midst of all this baseball experience he had so used his winters at Harvard that he had received from Williams an M. A. in English and History. He now accepted an instructorship at Columbia in Public Speaking at a salary of $1200. It took courage to make such a change with a wife and child to support. It was six years before his salary as a teacher had risen to that which he had received in baseball.

From Assistant Professor at Williams, in 1911, Lewis came to M. A. C. as Assistant Dean and Assistant Professor in English. He has held the position of Dean since 1914. In 1913-14 and also in 1918-19, Dean Lewis was Acting President of the college. Both administrations were unusually successful. In both he was able to secure new buildings and equipment. But it has been in his daily service as a patient, kindly friend of the student, knowing his interests and loving him; it is as an inspirer of students and faculty to generous fellowship and high aspirations; it is as an educator with vision, one who sees the path ahead but forgets not the dangers overcome; it is in this daily influence that Dean Lewis makes himself a force through all our college life.

One cannot refrain from mentioning his crystal candor—that which is, perhaps, most striking to his friends—his poise and judgment, his white heat on any issue of righteousness, his simplicity, his noble talent as a reader and speaker, his inspiring power as a teacher, and his love of men, a love that wherever he goes attracts like a magnet the love of all to him. He is a born leader.

It is a period of challenge to education. Every college requirement is called upon to prove its right to exist. A dean's special province in a college is to maintain the standard of scholarship. Yet no attack is ever waged to raise the standard or to make it more difficult to enter the college or to graduate from it. Vision is needed. Dean Lewis has it. And he has courage and knowledge of the game. There will be no lowering by a single inch of the hill-top from which Aggie's banner flies.

The Development of Athletics at Aggie

In 1869, when M. A. C. first opened her doors to the world, she also opened them to athletics. In those early days football, although an old sport in the mother country, had been practiced only to a limited extent by the New England colleges, and did not find favor at Aggie until a much later date. Rowing and baseball formed the popular pastimes of the first classes.

Prior to 1870, the sport of rowing and shell racing was wholly confined to the classical colleges, such as Harvard, Yale, and Brown. Amherst College entered the field in 1869 and suggested the following year that M. A. C. take up the sport and participate in a regatta between the two institutions. A rowing association was organized with Arthur D. Norcross of '71 as President, and William R. Peabody of '72 as Commodore. A regatta was arranged to be held on the Connecticut River at Hatfield, and a crew consisting of the following men was chosen: Geo. Leonard and Gideon Allen of '71, Edward Hardy of '72, Henry B. Simpson and Fred C. Eldred of '73, and George A. Duncan of '74. The course was three miles, with a turnstake one and one-half miles down-stream. The race resulted in a victory for M. A. C.

Encouraged by this successful beginning, in 1871 the college joined a newly organized Rowing Association of American Colleges. The first regatta was to be held at Ingleside the following July 21st, over a course three miles straight-away. Old Aggie was represented by the following men: Leonard and Allen, '71; Simpson and Eldred, '73; A. D. Norcross, '71, and F. M. Somers, '72.

The college association reorganized, electing Geo. H. Snow, '72 President, and re-electing Peabody, '72 Commodore. The crew went into training at once, the work consisting of practice on rowing weights arranged on the first floor of the old laboratory building, and running on the roads in the vicinity of the college, the latter exercise taken at night just previous to retiring. The crew, while thus exercising, often enjoyed the company of numerous followers, who trailed after them either to encourage them in their work or for the fun of the thing. As soon as the weather would permit, practice was begun on the river in the old boat, once weekly at first, later twice, and finally three times a week. It was the custom to walk over to the river after dinner, have their practice in the boat for a couple of hours, and then take a run back to the college by way of North Amherst.

In the meantime, the association purchased from Amherst College the boat in which her crew had rowed against M. A. C. in the previous race. This boat was much longer, narrower, and deeper than the old one, hence much better suited for the straight-away race which had been decided upon for the '71 regatta.

Ten days prior to the race the crew repaired to the course at Ingleside and took up quarters at the Ingleside Hotel. They gave up their whole time to training under Josh Ward of the famous Ward Brothers. The great race drew an immense attendance and the excitement was at a white heat. College crowds thronged the banks and bridges, Harvard's friends being most numerous, although a tremendous delegation from Brown was a close second. Conditions were ideal. The river was as smooth as a mirror. Betting was free, Harvard being fully backed, with Brown third in the pools.

At 7.04 o'clock, the crews received the word and were off. M. A. C. seemed to catch the water first. Both Brown and Harvard caught together, and the race was on. Stroking 47 to the minute, the Aggies dashed ahead of both rivals and continued to gain, foot by foot, slowly but surely, while Harvard and Brown fought desperately for second place. As the race progressed, M. A. C. continued to gain on Harvard, while the latter gradually widened the distance between them and the floundering Brunonians. Speculation ran rife on the banks and bridges with the Harvard supporters ever confident of a win. As the crews came nearer and nearer on the home stretch it was plain that the men from Amherst were winning, and, amidst the wild yells of her jubilant cohorts, the Maroon and White crew passed the finishing line, winners over Harvard by fourteen lengths. It was our first great inter-collegiate victory, and the last boat race in which M. A. C. ever participated.

Baseball now claimed the attention of the men of the early classes. This game was played in a more simplified and primitive manner than it is today. The game in those days was by no means as strenuous as the one we now see, and did not create any such degree of interest. It is interesting to note that the ball in those times was tossed to the batter instead of being pitched. The smoke ball then hadn't even become warmed. The velocity with which it was pitched to the batter was very tame as compared with the cannonball speed which is now used, and consequently hits were more numerous.

According to Lewis A. Nichols, who lays claim to having been the biggest ball "crank" of '72, in Seventy-One's freshman year the interest in baseball was not strong, and it was hard to find men enough in the class to form a nine. However, nines were formed from the individual classes, and an embryonic varsity was gathered together, all teams being included in the organization known as the Wilder Baseball Association. Among the early rivals played were Williston, Amherst High School, the Springfield Baseball Club, and Amherst College. The games were almost invariably hard-fought with the exception of those with Amherst College, in which we usually were defeated. The early academies in those days produced a much higher brand of ball than at present and were considered to be on a par with the smaller college nines.

The first varsity nine, made up of the first four classes entering college, consisted of the following men: W. L. Whitney '71, catcher; H. E. Mowrey '72, pitcher; F. C. Eldred '72, 1st base; F. B. Salisbury '72, 2nd base; S. S. Warner '73, 3rd base; L. A. Nichols '72, shortstop and Captain; Henry Wells '72, right field; E. D. Shaw '72, center field; and D. F. Milard '74, left field. There were games between colleges, but they were infrequent. Yale and Harvard had several games a year, but no other colleges were supposed to be sufficiently strong to make an interesting contest with these large universities.

As time went on and the game progressed, changes in rules and the method of pitching making it faster, the interest increased, more men went out for the teams, and as other colleges were also developing the game, M. A. C. soon began to build up a schedule and organization.

Football, the king of the fall sports, found its beginnings in the late seventies and was played much in the same manner as the old English game of Rugby Football. The forward line was made up of seven rushers and the backfield was lined up as at the present time. The style of play was fairly open but lacked the spectacular aerial display that we see today. Passing and kicking were more frequent than at present, and passing was allowable at the same time that the tackle was made. The game steadily developed and the old flying wedge style of play was adopted by the college. Close formations were used and college football seemed on the verge of approaching the old gladiatorial contests. The early teams played games with many of the smaller Eastern colleges and occasionally secured a date with Harvard. Intense rivalry with Amherst college marked the football games of the eighties.

As the college world has given an ever increasing impetus to football, so football has grown at Aggie until it now engages the feverish support of the entire student body, and every eligible man is out for the team, forced on by a strong backing of public sentiment. Such is the interest that has developed since the early days, when only a mild enthusiasm was shown for the game by the colleges and the sporting public.

Hockey as played today had its beginnings in 1909, but prior to this the devotees of the ice game played polo, which as a winter sport is the direct ancestor of the modern six or seven man hockey. The early polo teams consisted of five men: center rush, first rush, second rush, half back, and goal. In 1909, we started the season by defeating the Springfield Training School, by a score of 2-0, but lost to Amherst, M. I. T., and Trinity. Our needs in equipment at this time were great and the team was further handicapped by the lack of a trained coach. In 1910, the team found itself, gaining victories over Springfield, Wesleyan, and, best of all, Amherst. The third season of hockey was even more gratifying, with victories over some of the best teams in the East, including Yale, Williams, Trinity, and Amherst. With a reputation brightened by continued successes on the ice and with present conditions most favorable to future victories, hockey has firmly established itself as one of the foremost varsity sports.

A Lawn Tennis Association was first formed at M. A. C. in 1887, and from this small beginning the sport has continued at rather sporadic intervals ever since. In the eighties the classes were represented by teams, and spring tournaments were held annually with great zest. The tournaments of class tennis teams were carried on in this organization until popular demand gave it a varsity rating in 1907. A review of the season of 1911 shows a record of six victories out of nine matches. In 1910, tennis seemed at its height, the team going through the entire season without the loss of a match. Although tennis enthusiasts strove to hold their game to a varsity sport, poor courts and a gradual falling off of material, due to the direction of interest to other sports, resulted in the dropping of varsity tennis, after 1913, back to the rank of a class game. Various efforts have been made to reinstate it and there is a strong probability that, with the building of additional courts, tennis will again come to its own.

Basketball is one of the most recent of the inter-collegiate sports and was introduced at Aggie soon after it was invented at Springfield, Mass. The first varsity team was formed in 1902 and a schedule of games, including Amherst, Trinity, and Wesleyan, was played. A promising start was made in this sport, for five of the first eight games were won. The style of play then used was practically the same as now, there being five men on a side and a rule book very similar to that of today. After 1909, the sport was discontinued, because it was not quite satisfactory to the student body, and was not taken up again until the fall of 1917. The team of that year, captained by "Em" Grayson, was well supported and won the majority of its games. Since that time, as everyone knows, the sport has become more and more popular, and its successful future as a major athletic activity is assured.

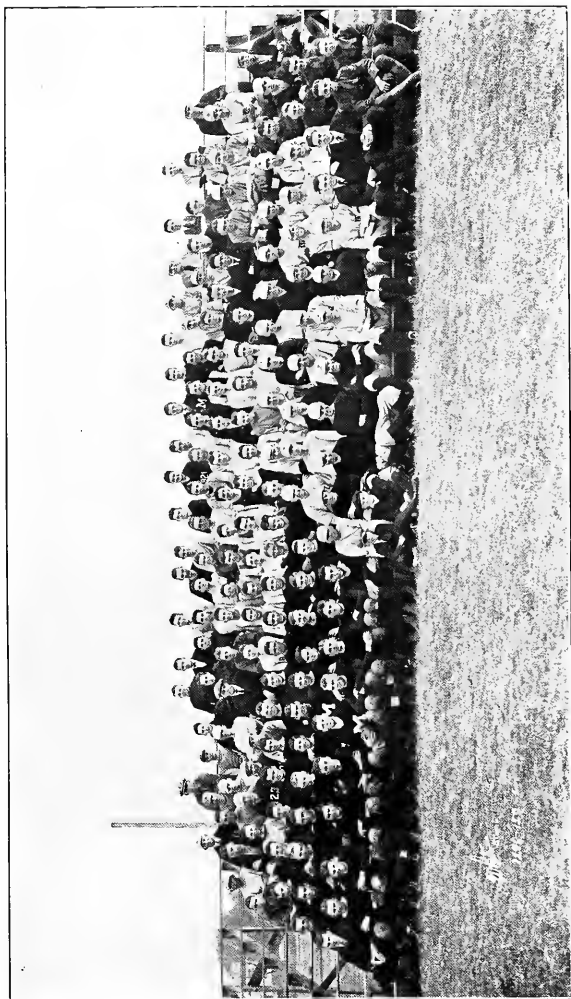

Track has always been a popular sport at M. A. C., and the records, as tabulated below, speak for themselves.

Our Alumni

The classes that used to be on our campus have gone. Not gone, however, to forget M. A. C.—to lose their identification as products of M. A. C. They are still the greatest factor of strength that our college has.

How the Massachusetts Agricultural College stands in the eyes of the public is a matter directly and primarily based on what the alumni make it. The prestige that Aggie enjoys, her reputation as a moulder of trained men, reverts to the success and achievements of her graduates.

Throughout the length and breadth of the United States, and in foreign lands, each alumnus bespeaks the college training he has received. He is our advertisement.

All the former students and graduates are kept closely in touch with the work at the institution through a thorough organization centering at the Alumni Office at Amherst and through seventeen subordinate organizations, scattered throughout the country, making the prevalent unique loyalty effective in the support of their alma mater.

With enthusiasm and active participation, alumni committees have assumed responsibility in college matters and undergraduate life. One, a committee on endowment, is directing public attention to the financial needs of the college not met by state appropriation funds. Another studies the whole matter of undergraduate activities to formulate plans for their best coordination, to make the most effective student life that will carry traditional significance. The Alumni Committee on the Course of Study investigates college curricula and advises on courses at M. A. C. Purely administrative problems constitutes the scope of still another. On the campus, alumni membership is represented on five of the college committees.

The monthly alumni newspaper disseminates the information that keeps each "old grad" interested in the work being done, and serves as the mouthpiece of the entire organization. The movement for this liberal participation in college affairs has been greatly strengthened by the contributions—in many cases sacrifices—made by alumni for the erection of Memorial Hall, which is not only a monument to the fifty M. A. C. men that gave their lives in the World War, but also to alumni fidelity.

World Aggie Night this past autumn, when in centers throughout the country forty simultaneous dinners were held, is fairly indicative of the prevailing interest. Winter Alumni Day, held on the campus this February, was attended by more than twice as many as on any other like occasion.

Commencement in 1921 will mark the greatest reunion ever held, when the fifty classes of M. A. C. will return to the campus to celebrate the semi-centennial anniversary of their college.

Every M.A.C. man back June 10-15, 1921

Senior Class History

Three years and four months ago was brought forth upon this campus a new class, dedicated to the proposition that all men are created honorable. This was the class of 1921, the fiftieth class at M. A. C. For three years we struggled along, testing whether that principle could long endure in this college as a guide to the relations of the students with each other, with the faculty, and with themselves. Now, a successful Honor System is in operation at M. A. C. It is no doubt yet susceptible to improvements, but it seems firmly established; it is with us to stay; and it is now an integral and wholesome part of Aggie student life. This Honor System has been the one great concern of our class. We were instrumental in its inception; we formed it and shaped it; tried it, cast it, and recast it; awakened college interest in it; and ultimately extended it to the whole college. Such was our contribution to our Alma Mater. We believe it a worthy one and are proud of it.

Ours has been an unusual history. Entering in the early days of the war, before the country was cognizant of the real character of the struggle, we passed through a period of growing unrest and increasing patriotic impulse during our freshman year. In the early part of our sophomore year, all members of the class who were physically fit were in the military service. But, with the armistice, most of the class was able to come back for the beginning of the second term, in 1919. This group, together with a large number of returned Aggie men of other classes, has composed the class since that time.

Early, we developed a strong college spirit. Throughout, we have had our full share of interclass victories, and have made our contribution to varsity athletic and non-athletic activities. As seniors may we continue our success as a class, and as leaders in undergraduate life may we be given the foresight to choose wisely, and the strength to act always for the good of our Alma Mater!

Junior Class History

One more year has rolled around, and once more the 1922 Historian wriggles his rusty pen. We have passed through the vale of tears watered by Dean's Board River, and surrounded by the rough crags of Botany, Physics, Zoology, Aggie Ec., and Agronomy, and have come out upon the green fields of Pomology, An. Hus., and Aggie Ed. Very few of our classmates have fallen by the wayside. We still have nearly a hundred members, whereas we began our career here with less than a hundred and twenty.

Our class spirit has always been our great pride. Starting our college life at the close of the war, it fell upon our shoulders in a very large measure to bring back the customs of old Aggie. We easily won our Freshman Banquet Scrap, although some of us made a tour of Shutesbury, returning via Pelham.

The sophomore year found "old '22" still in power. We beat the "frosh" in the wrestling bouts, the nightshirt parade, and the sixty-man rope-pull in rapid succession. Our class basketball team placed second only to the champion freshman five. Although we lost the Banquet Scrap on a technicality, we had the pleasure of meeting and beating the yearlings in an even man-to-man battle. The scene of the encounter was laid at the top of the hill behind the Cold Storage Plant. The hour was midnight, and the entire class crept up the hill in search of 1923, who were in hiding. Suddenly yells were heard from the excited freshmen, and immediately our ranks swept forward, led by a line of torch-bearers. The classes met, and for two hours the fight raged with little or no advantage to either side. Then two or three "sophs" could be seen carrying off some unlucky freshman. After a little, the would-be banqueters were all tied up and deported to neighboring towns to think over the situation.

While we are strong for class spirit, we place Aggie spirit far ahead of it. In our freshman year we placed two men on the basketball team, and one on the baseball team. Last year we had ten men on the varsity football squad, six on the basketball squad, and three on the baseball team. This year we had three regulars on the football team, seventeen men on the squad, and four regulars on the basketball team. In non-athletics we are well represented in every field.

Surely this record shows that our spirit is really that of Aggie—and such a spirit is the end toward which all classes should work.

Roger Melvin Acheson

"ACHEY"

"Art is power"

New Bedford

A T P House

New Bedford High School

1899; Vegetable Gardening; Varsity Football (2, 3); Varsity Track (1, 2); INDEX Board; A T P.

This apparently demure by-product of New Bedford sauntered into M. A. C. in the fall of 1918, and after testing out the S. A. T. C., decided to stay with us a few years longer. He likes to express his witty ideas pictorially—behold the INDEX illustrations. He's a strong enough man in football and boxing, but in a rough-house—"Row-Dee-Dow!"

John Hollis Andrews

"ANDY"

"A mighty man is he,

With large and sinewy hands"

Vinyard Haven

15 North College

Tisbury High School

1899; Animal Husbandry; Class Football (2); Varsity Football (2, 3); Animal Husbandry Club; Catholic Club; Commons Club.

This broad-shouldered islander hails from among the cranberries and codfish. However, we think that the latter have been the cause of his muscles, for he is a true sample of the husky fishermen that frequent the shores of that locality. "Andy" gets his recreation from scrapping, and has become the professional boxer of old North Dorm. Only once since his advent here has he received the K. O., and that was back in the heartless S. A. T. C. days. But he can scrap with his books as well as his classmates, and has often been among the lucky few at final time. We all wish him good luck in the future.

Hubert Judson Bainton

"HUBE"

"A man who smokes, thinks like a sage, and acts like a Samaritan"

Hyde Park

12 North College

Hyde Park High School

1900; Pomology; Varsity Football (3).

"Hube" came up out of Boston into the beautiful Amherst out-of doors quite similar (as we were told in Ent (26) to a pupa who bursts out into a butterfly. For ever since he has lived a carefree life, worrying mostly whether his dancing has been over 85%, rather than his marks in dull study. But we'll not hold this trifling of frivolity against him, for when he has passed into the third cycle of his life, emerging from cap and gown into the cold world, he intends to settle down to prosaic labor in becakled henyards and infested apple orchards.

George Louis Baker

"BAKE"

I dare do all that may become a man"

Amherst

Amherst

Amherst High School

1899; Chemistry; K P Φ.

When the raucous sound of a horn and the creak of protesting springs shatter the quiet of the peaceful town of Amherst at 7:39 A. M., one may be certain that "li'le George" will arrive at Chapel on time again from South Amherst. It is a doubtful journey, but "Bake" has the distance well calculated as the result of numberless trips. Although he is very fond of "Pete's" interesting courses in the Chem Lab., he does not allow them to interfere with an intimate study of the Mount Holyoke campus, a course which consists of three lab. periods per week. A successful chemical future may be predicted for George.

Kenneth Allen Barnard

"KEN"

"He grasps me with a skinny hand"

Shelburne

Q. T. V. House

Arms Academy

1900; Animal Husbandry; Collegian (1, 2, 3); Class Baseball (1, 2); Class Rifle Team (2); Inter-Class Athletic Board (3); Q. T. V.

'Tis said that a swift current washed him down the Connecticut River, and that he floated ashore not far from M. A. C. But little do we care how he arrived, for we are all well aware that "Ken's" here with us. But the question is, "What are we going to do with him now that he is here?" The profs as yet have been unable to put a stop to his mental machinery, and he is a promising candidate for Phi Kappa Phi.

Robert Henry Beckwith

"BECK"

"The price of learning is much earnest study"

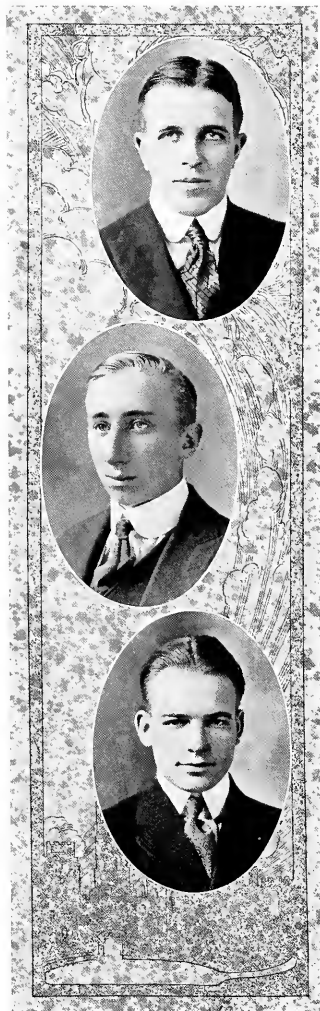

Pittsfield

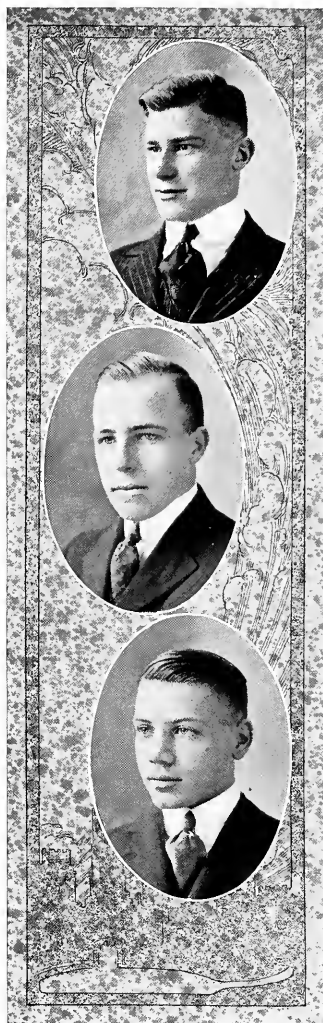

Entomology Bldg.

Pittsfield High School

1900; Animal Husbandry; Cross Country (2); Nominating Committee (3); Commons Club.

"Beck" is an agriculturalist who has majored in General Ag. and who spends his summers in the hills applying what he has acquired during the school year. He is a quiet studious chap with a Jovian aspect which has won him the well-merited name of "Judge." Debating has been his pet hobby, and in the serious heat of intense intellectual struggles we have more than once paused in our distant campus rounds to hear again the volleying thunder of his golden oratory, which, assisted by voluminous statistics, cannot fail to score convincingly.

Leslie Dana Bent

"LES"

"A man's best wealth ought to be himself"

Medford

AXA House

Medford High School

1900; Class Relay (1, 2); Class Track (1, 2); Class Baseball (1, 2); Varsity Football (3); Relay (2); AXA.

He's an honest chap with a bluff, rollicking sort of a personality and a hale and hearty good-fellowship about him that makes his handshake a real one. "Les" is far from being a grind and has more than once drawn a frown from the pros only to pull out of a tight place to a good finish, when the going was particular rough. Athletics have ever held his attention and an ability to circle the board track with the best, and a natural "bent" towards baseball have given him recognition premier among the multitude.

Roger Walcott Blakely

"BLAKE"

"Swift as a shadow, short as any dream"

Medford

3 Hallock Street

Medford High School

1900; Animal Husbandry; Class Captain (1); Animal Husbandry Club; INDEX (3).

This bundle of concentrated "pep" was originally a native of Medford, but now finds the Connecticut Valley country much to his liking. "Blake" was first forcibly brought to our attention when he appeared as the "Bloke's" right-hand man during our sophomore drill, and so snappily caused us to do "squads right" and "squads wrong." In other respects he is quite normal and is fast regaining our love, now that he is in "mufti" again.

Raymond Stanwood Blanchard

"KID"

"It is less painful to learn in youth than to be ignorant in old age"

Quincy

3 North College

Quincy High School

1901; Animal Husbandry; Class Baseball (2).

Kid Blanchard is one of the youngest of the illustrious class of 1922, indicating a precocious mental development. He takes his studies seriously, and usually appears very much depressed just before final exams, but always seems able to hold his own in a battle with the pros. Baseball has always seemed to have a strange fascination for this youth, and in the spring his idle moments are always employed in the vicinity of the diamond.

Known to several systematists as Broamly

Bromilaus (LaC.).

An exotic form, found only in Southbridge, closely related to the genus homo sapiens.

May occasionally be observed in the Ent. Bldg., assimilating knowledge osmotically from stacks of Zoo and Geology note-books; also, emerging from said Bldg., in the late hours of the night, wrapped in deep biological meditation; often found, too, "bullfesting" in the dorms.

Mansfield A T P House

Mansfield High School
1900; Animal Husbandry; Burnham Declamation (1); Class Track (2); Varsity Track (2);

"Charley" is a direct descendent of Mansfield, Mass. He descended on Amherst as one of the soldier boys of the S. A. T. C. in the fall of '18.
Upon graduating from this, he continued at M. A.
C., unperturbed by the powers that be. In spite of his dreamy eyes, he is a wide awake youth and very little really gets by him. He is majoring in Animal Husbandry and when he has exhausted what they have to offer here, he will start in to raise bucks, make "bucks," but will probably not "pass the buck."

Paul Lapham Burnett

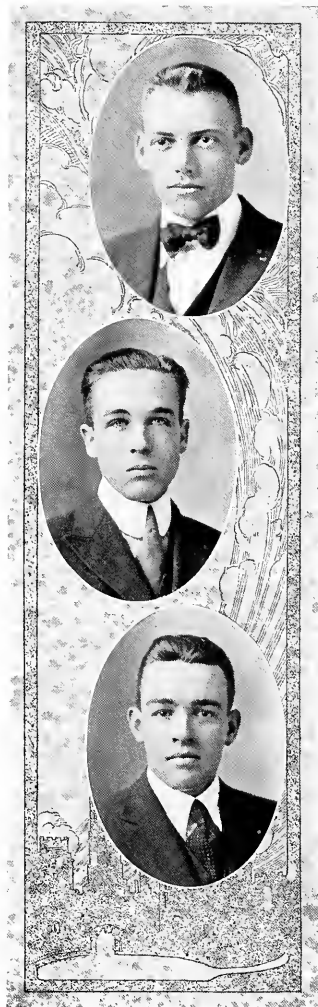

"PAUL"

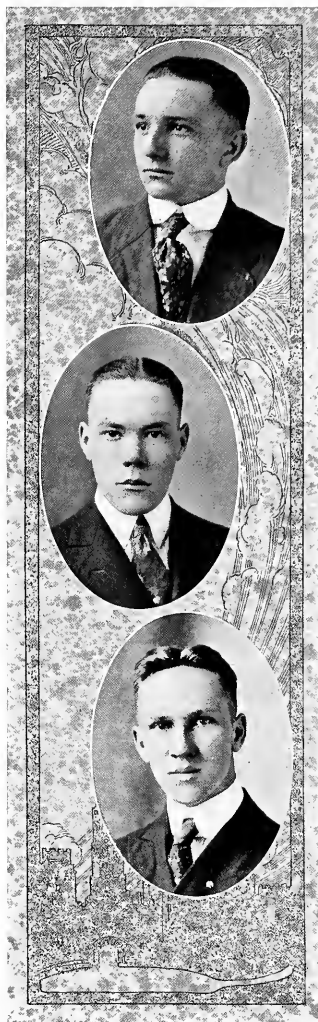

"Silence is golden"

Leicester 11 South College

Leicester Academy
1896; Agricultural Education; Glee Club (1);
Collegian (3); OX.

Although Paul has had his fling in Gay Paree with the rest of the boys in kahki, the atmosphere of that irresponsible and cosmopolitan place apparently failed completely to alter his gloomy and sedate outlook upon life. Wise beyond his years, conservative to ultra-conservatism, and emanating benign dignity, he stalks amidst his gayer and more frivolous companions in much the same manner as Noah must have wended his way among the sinning Israelites. We often have marvelled that he should have chosen agriculture as his field of action, and would much prefer to see him clad in a black robe and gracing some judge's seat.

"Ed" loves to air his views before all mankind. His conversational powers have a tremendous range, virility, and apparent inexhaustibility. Although he has whispered his intention of retiring to some Connecticut tobacco plantation, where he intends to produce that noxious weed in quality equal to Cuba's finest, we all feel that this over and abundant power of long and sustained intellectual reaction in the form of copious verbiage should not be wasted in the deserted fields. The lecture platform or the small professor's chair should clasp this prodigy with eager arms, so that countless multitudes of less favored mortals might gather before him for inspiration and peaceful slumber.

This product of wild and wooly Springfield drifted into '22 without the least commotion on his part, and with the idea of someday breaking into art. It may not seem true, but "Ed" is a woman hater, especially disliking those who break up his fussing parties with the call, "Come,—, it's one o'clock." When occasion demands, "Ed" can wield a wicked pen, but on no consideration does he believe in getting up in time for breakfast in the morning. He considers that appearance counts for quite a bit and follows it out in his work as a budding landscape architect.

Although "Chape" is not inclined to force himself to the front in any way, his influence is felt in a quiet and unostentatious manner. Through inclination he is by way of being an embryo poet, and many a luckless prof and fellow student has been satirized by him in a goodnatured way when the spirit moved him. Science lost a botonist of note when he decided to forsake botany for teaching.

Eleanor came to us from the "Great Metropolis" of Amesbury to get an "edification," so to speak. Results are forthcoming, if one may judge by her frequent visits to the Chem and Micro labs. "Chasie's" only drawback is a peculiar fondness for a last snooze in the morning—especially on Mondays and Fridays. However, she makes up for this weakness on Sunday afternoons by hikes, both afoot, and on snowshoes—when the weather favors us with snow. Chasie is a "good scout," and we believe that good things may come in small parcels after all.

This latest pink-haired acquisition from the sacred precincts of Sunderland is of the variety whose smile will not come off. Always in good humor, he makes many lasting friends. As to the fair sex, he says little, but from the reports of the eavesdroppers at their councils, we gather that he is an expert at the one-handed game of "Motoring." In spite of his "petit" stature, he has persevered in athletics, especially in football and basketball. In truth he is a "Bra" lad and one whose friendship is a valuable asset to anyone.

"How is the weather up there?" is the question often asked of this chap. Since coming to the campus he has taken up many things. But whatever are his likes and dislikes, he is well known over the campus for his cheering ways, and we all hope that the future holds something good in store for him.

This representative of Arlington evidently believes in living up to the reputation made by his predecessors, for he finds an outlet for his superfluous energy in no mean manner on the football and baseball fields and hockey rink. In the latter it must be admitted that "Hub" can certainly wield a mean stick. That his talents are not limited is suggested by the variegated color of the envelopes he receives so often. Although "Hubert" has been known to investigate the contents of a few books occasionally, he still maintains a good average in the fussing league.

His scope was soon enlarged and since that time "Cot" is often seen in the neighboring villages seeking to enlarge his acquaintanceship. Nothing is more to his liking than a little scrimmage either on or off the football field, and George even maintains that a little parlor scrimmage is the best of training. Reports have drifted down from the wilds of North Amherst that as a wielder of a hockey stick he is in the first class and that his greatest disappointment was when '23 decided to call off the class hockey game. Mr. Robert Hodgson, Agricultural Economist-to-be. Temporary Headquarters, Old Chapel, M. A. C. Bob joined the class during our Sophomore year, and since then has been with us "in voice and deed." Being one of Uncle Sam's fighters, he endeavored to show us how things were done in the regular army. But like all the rest, he soon realized that the U. S. Army and Aggie's Battalion were two different tactical units. We see but little of Bob now, only his heels occasionally on the way to classes or to chapel. But his major explains this. In spite of the sentence of "two years at hard labor in the Library," which Judge Cance handed to him, he is quite agreeable and very popular.

"Dynamite" they called him, and "Dynamite" it was. Although some prefer the name "Holy," we rather think that the first name has the more noise and suits him the best. He is one of Aggie's most loyal rooters, and no athletic event would be quite complete without him in the cheering section. But when it comes to dances and Over the Mountain trips, he makes the old slogan of "Wine, Women, and Song" seem like a fallacy. With him around, it might better be changed to "Jazz, Near Beer, and Chicken."

He may be characterized with some precision as a prof in the embryo. We refer to the typical dreamy prof, sailing in a realm of far away thoughts and hazy projects, too lofty for the grasp of all of us. Hussey is to be classed with this group of individuals, from whom have transpired throughout the years of human history many of man's highest achievements. He has apparently incorporated the wisdom of the owl with the tact of Demosthenes. We are wondering just when he will favor the world with some voluminous scientific treatise to grace the dusty shelves with other volumes of their kind.

"Editor-in-Chief" should have been his middle name, because it comes so natural to him. During the second term, when Belchertown is closed for the winter, he graces the top floor of South College in the Belchertown Colony that flourishes there. He is a man of wit and humor and enjoys nothing better than a practical joke, especially when it is not on himself.

Austin is a youth of many pronounced and pointed proclivities, which he very modestly makes light of. When he parted his locks in the centre of a noble brow and betook himself to warmer climes, that unflinching modesty still clung to him, even though he at once became the centre of very considerable and flattering speculation in certain quarters. Austin has all the earmarks of a wonderful corporation or bond salesman, but he has expressed his intention of pursuing the elusive orchard insect, and has the ambition to raise a herd of pure-blooded Jerseys that will eclipse those of the Hood Farms and then some.

Knapp may be set forth as the young man with the magic smile. A smile which dispels all gloom and brings an answering muscular contortion from even the longest visage. Of course he is a great favorite with the ladies and from his stand at the cashier's desk in busy Draper Hall, that magnetic smile of his is very much in evidence. Many a fair co-ed has felt its radiant influence, but as far as can be judged, the smile is to date absolutely impartial in the casting of its beaming rays.

The closing of hostilities abroad turned Frank's attention once more toward Aggie's campus, and in the fall of '19 he was one of many to resume the four years' course. Though his spirit had once been with another class, he soon acquired the spirit of '22. Whether he is aspiring to become a great orator, we do not know, but we will say that at oratory he is certainly clever. Although he may never become an advocate of grape juice, he may yet become a second Bryan. However, if he should turn to farming, he may raise onions that will take your breath away. Who knows?

We were first made aware of "Abe's" presence on the campus by a painful succession of strange sounds coming from one of the "Old Bloke's" bugles, for at that time Abe preferred bugling to drilling, at the expense of the ranks. He soon afterwards proved that he was no slouch at basketball, football, or his studies, but when engrossed in business he is in his element. "Don" hails from the little hamlet of Byfield, and was originally with the class of '21, but his plans were upset by the war, from which he graduated as a second "Loogie." He then picked out '22 and settled down. His accomplishments are numerous, mostly vocal. In the dim, dismal, winter evenings, on emerging from the "Hash House," one may hear the night air rent asunder by the ungodly war-whoops of this individual and his partner-in-crime, "Brom." Also, his famous imitation of a baboon in distress stands as one of the greatest arguments for evolution that has ever been produced.

"Jim" was one of the few who kept the home fires burning here at Aggie during the war. Since his stay on the campus he has won many friends. Jim's one ambition is to make the varsity eleven, and if coming events cast their shadows in the prescribed fashion, he will surely make the team before he leaves college. He most certainly deserves credit for the remarkable way he has stuck by the squad in past years. Just what Jim expects to do when he finishes, no one can ascertain; but it is safe to say that he will be at the head of some large farm one of these days.

We have had many exceptional athletes at various times at Aggie, but none that quite hold the place that "Lavvy" does. He is well versed in local history and might, if persuaded, be able to unravel such mysteries as the rolling of the cannonball down the stairs of South long after taps had been sounded. The apparent ease with which he performs difficult feats is most comforting to his supporters at critical moments. John would make a good military leader, and his generalship was shown to good advantage in the Banquet Scrap, as many a luckless "frosh" will testify.

Harry is a model youth in that he never drinks, swears, smokes, gambles, nor makes mistakes. Of course he might be tempted to smoke a cigar, just to cure a cold. But drink! Never! And the only time that he swears is when he inadvertently snaps the bedroom Yale lock, while on his way to the showers, and suddenly realizes that he is attired in his seashore regalia, with no key on his side of the door. As for gambling, well, just ask him if he can read from the Bible and then turn and run, lest you get the connection too quickly. But whatever his faults are, he is sure to be a high flyer.

The explanation of why most of the profits of the college store are often eaten up, rests in this youthful business man's appetite. Much of his time is now spent in improving the morale of the co-eds, and the hardest rule for him to refrain from breaking freshman year was that of not walking with them. "Lock" is a promising young artist at present, and in the future will probably revolutionize art, but at all events, he will be leading the happy life.

Lo, our Northampton prodigy! His motto is, "Ask me; I know." Judging from the fact that he gave the valedictory and received the honor medal ("Pro Merry Toe"), Northampton High found that this remark was not unfounded. Chemistry rather than Smith girls is his major interest, and he is certainly showing ability there. In spare time, he is drafted into the army of food producers and has harvested some big crops from his backyard farm and a few acres of meadow land outside the town. Northampton is putting a cement boulevard out to his house so that future generations may gaze at the home of the great scientist (and the nearby home of Vice President Coolidge) from the "rubber-neck" auto.

"Shorty" comes from Methuen and is pursuing courses that will fit him to become a "Poultry Fancier" or a "Fancy Poultrier" as the case may be. He came during the S. A. T. C. period, and along with many others still expresses his sentiments on the curse of militarism in no uncertain terms. His room in North College is a veritable center of musical activities and his melting tenor voice, rising above the din, can be heard at all hours of the night. To cap the climax, he is a good student, and shows his virility by taking botany as a side line.

"Did anyone mention hockey?" If they did they must not forget this fellow's name, for the way he can knock that puck around makes the ordinary ice carver fade into the background. Yet his skill does not end there, for he can make some of the pros fully believe that every person is a little George Washington. But when it comes to "Wild Women" he is even more clever. Some are of the opinion that he got his training with the fair sex at the Arlington High School. But whatever the case may be, he shows his "hockeyistic" traits, for he never picks out any "old skates."

When "Mac" decided to relinquish the cares of managing a railroad or two in Worcester and entered the class of '22, the class was by all odds the gainer. He is in his element when delivering an address, probably the result of majoring in public speaking, and as the spirit is apt to move him at any hour of the day or night, those about him must be always prepared to subdue him. "Mickey" has never been convicted of "fussing," for he prefers to spend his time on more weighty matters.

As a result of the exceedingly large and vicious mosquito crop of 1918, Maplewood, N. J., lost one of its most ardent and studious students. Despite the mosquitoes, however, "Stu" must have some attraction in that part of the country, for he is almost always the first man to leave the campus at the end of the term. The Dean's Board never bothered him because he always disliked publicity and steered clear of it. In fact he is always to be seen with a book under his arm or bending over a volume in the library.

Here is a youth who seems saturated completely in that strange and mystic atmosphere which permeates the oldest of our campus monuments,—the ancient Chem. Lab. Here we may find him at almost any hour of the day peering into the lurid depths of certain strange concoctions which he has formulated before him in an amazing array of slender test tubes. In his few moments outside Chem. Lab. and away from his beloved laboratory apron, we see him dreaming over a violin and amusing himself with delicate and subtle reveries. We wonder if we haven't a second Professor Peters in embryo among us.

"Ken" has many of the traits of his great namesake, and has well merited the title of "the Dean," for he is beyond all doubt the wisest-looking embryonic "man of the world" in school. His air of perpetual gravity, emphasized by an elite pair of tortoise-shell spectacles, sets well upon his noble and benign being. Though to say that the "Dean" is a social light of no mean ability, and that Smith and Mt. He has never evinced an especially eager desire to bear too heavy a load of the higher knowledge imparted so freely at Aggie and which a little perseverance renders a possession, but has contented himself with a moderate burden which has allowed him to shine in other fields. He seems to be able to fill in anywhere in many kinds of sports, and in military circles he has shown more talent than a little. Since this son of the "Nutmeg State" was persuaded to forsake his native haunts and join the festive throng at Aggie, he has made a most favorable impression. Although reports have been received that he is a wild "bar" hunter of note, and in spite of the fact that his numerous deerskins have been seen, he does not seem terribly dangerous at first sight. "Duke's" trips across the proverbial range are frequent, but, all in all, he finds time enough for numerous campus activities. His genial humor and well supplied stock of jokes make "Duke" always in demand and one well worth knowing.

1898; Vegetable Gardening; Class Basketball (3).

The agrarian experience of this man began with scraping the weeds from his front drive back home. Aspiring greater efficiency in the art, he signed up with Prexy's alma mater. He landed at Mass. Aggie ostensibly to investigate the problems of back-yard culture, though we have heard that there is an inconvenient cut system at Michigan Aggie. He does not believe in the old adage that "distance makes the heart grow fonder" and hence felt the need of a more favorable situation. He's pretty smooth at times and is generally successful as. "He wants what he wants when he wants it."

Hadley 96 Pleasant Street

Hopkins Academy

1900; Chemistry; K Σ.

"Whit" is one of the numerous chemists of the class, coming from not very far down the valley. To one who knows not this chap it would appear as if he were only an occasional visitor on the campus. There is a secret that surrounds him, and explains why he is only seen in the middle of the day and late at night. It is wrapped up in these three words: Chemistry, Women, and Sleep. "Whit" certainly knew his calling when he chose Chem for his major, and if in later years he should get to making explosives for concerns, we may yet expect to hear big reports from him.

When a mixture of T. N. T., dynamite, nitroglycerine, "Judge," "Life," and "Punch" arrived on the campus we knew that dear little George was here. Because of the impression made, both on the campus and himself, he decided that a year unclassified was too short, and entered as a "frosch" the next year. Anyone wondering why the "sophs" lost so much sleep and grew so gray-haired that year, is respectfully referred to "George," for he broke more rules than were made, and was not at all phased by pond and arena parties. Since that time he has directed some of his enthusiasm into the cheerleading line, and some of his quick wit into the Squib. It is needless to say that certain neighboring classical institutions fully appreciate and are entertained by "Whitey."

After spending two years at Simmons, Margaret felt the call to Aggie. Consequently, 1922 became once more the possessor of the huge sum of five co-eds. Just why she should wish to change her perfectly good major, Household Economics, to Microbiology, we don't know. One thing we do know, however, is that she is reliable. Her motto seems to be, "Ask and thou shalt receive," or whether it be serious work or fun, Margaret has never been known to refuse her assistance and support. She declares that the Burlington trip was "wonderful" but "Oh what lameness, what stiffness, what aches and pains!"

1899; Dairying.

This representative of the home of Smith College decided to forsake all earlier classes and, because of the well-known merits of 1922, to enter this class. He is most often seen covering the ground between the station and the campus with lengthy strides just in time to miss chapel. He is supposed to be a good student and well known in Hamp society, but—time will tell!

Sophomore Class History

In the fall of 1919, one hundred and ten innocent, little pea-green freshmen landed on the spacious M. A. C. campus to form that protoplasmic-like body, the class of 1923. However, we did not stay in this stage very long for, although we still acted as a unit, our individual characteristics began to assert themselves, and a sort of cellular differentiation went on till we had formed a highly-developed, metazoic-like body.

We played the traditional part in the baptismal exercises at the Pond, but soon showed our strength in football, basketball, track, and baseball, 1922 finding us nearly invincible. Our freshman play was unusual for its originality.

We also developed some grinds, but we shall pass lightly over them, for they represented but a minority. During freshman year we learned among other things that "ontogeny recapitulates phylogeny," and how not to write an expository theme with a lead pencil.

In September, 1920, when we encountered a new group of men, we were much older than in the previous year. These men proved to be a husky lot, but they had their swim across the muddy pond, as all good freshmen should. This year we also had "Billy" to encounter, and he soon let us know—to the sorrow of some—that he is still running true to tradition. Then there was Zoo—memories of the skate! Our athletic prowess has steadily increased. The varsity teams, particularly football, have been greatly strengthened by our men. We also stand a good chance of winning the interclass championship in basketball, as we have not yet lost a game.

May we prove to be in the future, as we have been in the past, a class that does things for the honor and advancement of old Aggie!

Freshman Class History

We, the humble and lowly class of nineteen-twenty-four, entered upon our cruise in the good ship "Agriculture" after leaving the C. V. (Central Varmint) and B. and M. (Bad and Moreso) railway coaches on the twenty-ninth of September last. Our first reception was in the form of a nightshirt parade, tendered to us at the end of a paddle by those rude sophomores. We thought that we were not going to like the college as well as we had expected, but after the reception in the Social Union rooms and the beginning of the rushing season, everybody seemed so kind and so interested in us, that we forgot the bitter taste of our first experiences. The "sophs" played us another dirty trick, tho. They got us on the end of a long rope and hauled us through the pond in spite of the fact that our friends, the juniors, all encouraged us to such an extent that we thought it would be as easy as pie for us to overpower our rivals. We began to realize then that we had to be a little better organized, so we got going and paid back the sophomores in the six-man rope-pull. We guess they won't forget that, right away.

Well, after the smoke had cleared, and pledge day was over, and we found ourselves scattered in different fraternities, we renewed our efforts toward class unification, and just now we are going strong in basketball. Our career at M. A. C., however, has just begun, and if enough of us succeed in dodging the well-laid snares set for us by "Bull" Prince and others, we may amount to something yet, and have an answer when someone hollers at us, "What kep yer?"

Cavalry Replaces Infantry Here

The instituting of a cavalry unit at M. A. C. in the fall of '20 marked the passing of the old-time Infantry R. O. T. C. The heart-breaking commands of "Squads right" and "Squads left" are gone forever, and from now on the yearlings and "sophs" will march to the tune of "Fours right" and "Fours left."

In reorganizing the tactical unit, the Government has provided one of the best equipped outfits of the kind, and Aggie should be proud to have such an excellent troop. The Military Department is in charge of Lieutenant-Colonel R. W. Walker, assisted by Major F. E. Shnyder, and Aggie's old stand-by and ardent advocate, Sergeant Lee. In addition, one stable sergeant, one "top kick," twelve privates, one horse shoer, and one saddler go to make up the total personnel. A large stable provides ample room for the thirty-six horses and two mules. The Government, however, makes provision for a maximum of sixty horses for a unit of this size, and it is hoped that in the near future accommodations for the remaining twenty-four horses available, may be erected.

Cavalry training embraces many things besides skill in riding. A man learns how to shoot both the rifle and pistol, how to make maps and sketches, and how to operate automatic rifles and machine guns. Training in leadership is practical and continuous for the sophomores, and those taking the advanced course.

The success of the cavalry depends entirely upon the spirit of the men while performing their duties, and is to be judged by the number of men who take the advanced course, are graduated from it, and are offered commissions in the O. R. C. Any man, however, continuing this training throughout the entire four years, must spend six weeks between his Junior and Senior years in a training camp. During these last two years, commutation from the Government is received for the time spent in training.

The value of such a training is very great. In time of war, one is prepared to serve his country in a position that not only brings credit on himself but also on the institution from which he has received his education. Every fellow should have an avocation, self-satisfying and quite different from the regular, monotonous, daily routine. Why, then, not allow the cavalry to serve the purpose, as well as any other college activity? To a student who intends to be a leader among men, a training of this kind is invaluable. But, in addition, it is useful and serves to bring him in contact with other educated men of the country, and acts in reality as a letter of recommendation.

The change in the military unit has stimulated interest to a marked degree among the undergraduates. Under the unusually persistent directors that this Department now has, the concerted action of all the leaders should make as fine a cavalry troop here at Aggie, as can be found anywhere in the United States.

FOOTBALL

Football Season of 1920

The 1920 football season opened auspiciously, October 2nd, when the strong C. A. C. team was buried under a 28-0 score. But far more important to the college and to the student body was the revival of the old Aggie spirit, so dear to the hearts of all loyal Aggie men. Crushed by the war and deplorably weak last year, the spirit of the college gained stimulus when, with the first crisp days of fall, forty football men appeared some weeks before the opening of college to begin the long, hard grill which means a well-balanced and victorious eleven. The royal rooters, returning a little later, found four teams out on the athletic field, eager and ready for the first game. Once more the "Old King" was supreme on the campus. Everybody was thinking, eating, and talking football.

CAPTAIN POOLE

MANAGER FULLER

LENT, All-N. E. (2)

The first game was a decisive victory. The eleven showed power and speed, and under the excellent generalship of Captain Poole, it overwhelmed the heavy C. A. C. team, running up the largest score in several years.

The following Saturday Bates clashed with us on Alumni Field, and the second victory of the season was chalked up, 21-7. Bates presented a fast, heavy aggregation, but again superior overhead play and heady handling of the team gave a clean-cut win.

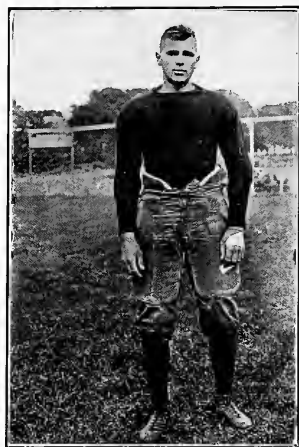

Using the stellar kicking of Collins to good advantage and developing a strong offensive in the closing period of play, we ran up our string of victories to three by defeating W. P. L., 21-6. At no time in the game was the issue in doubt.

The climax of the season was attained when Vermont was humbled, 21-7. No less than one hundred and twenty-five students "hoboed it" to Burlington to see the combat. Football enthusiasm had reached its old-time fervor, and the players owned the campus on their return.

The first setback came as a complete surprise, when New Hampshire State gained the distinction of being the first opponent to defeat us on Alumni Field.

1922 INDEX

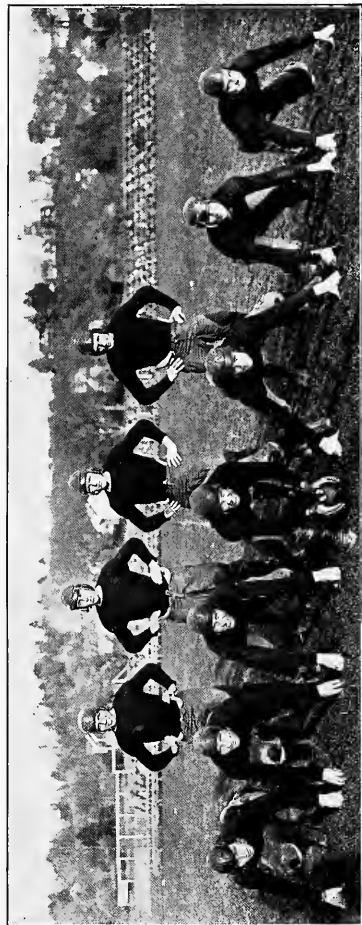

The score was 9-0. It was a closely contested game with the wonderful kicking of Conners, the N. H. S. fullback, being the deciding factor.

Running into a little hard luck, the team next played Rhode Island State to a 7-7 tie. A blocked kick gave the visitors their only chance to score.

The Springfield game found every Aggie man on Pratt Field, backing the Maroon and White to the limit. Springfield had the fastest and heaviest team in years, and when the final whistle ended the fray, the score stood 28-7, with Springfield on the long end. The Maroon and White, hopelessly outweighed, fought gamely, but the odds were too great, and in spite of the plucky fighting spirit of the team, the Springfield steamroller was not to be denied. Lent was the bright spot on the Aggie lineup throughout the struggle.

The season ended brilliantly when Tufts was taken into camp and the whitewash applied on the Medford Oval to the tune of 21-0. Tufts fought hard, but Aggie speed and forward passing kept the ball constantly moving down the field.

That the 1920 team impressed the sporting world was shown when the Springfield Union picked its All-New England mythical elevens. King '21 was given a berth on the first team, Lent '21 and Grayson '23 on the second team, and Poole '21 on the third team. These teams were selected from all the colleges in New England except Yale and Harvard, and no college placed more than four men on the three teams. King was awarded the Pond Memorial Medal, which is given each year to the man doing most for Aggie football.

CAPTAIN JAKEMAN

spirit and fight made the result of the contest doubtful to the very last.

In the contest with Amherst, played on Pratt Field, the Aggie team, true to the old traditions, came through with a brilliant victory over their old rivals. It was the Commencement game for Amherst and was played before a large number of their alumni as well as the entire student bodies of both colleges. No runs were made until the fifth inning, when

Although during the season of 1920 only six games were won out of thirteen, the season was not considered entirely unsatisfactory from the standpoint of those most interested in furthering the sport at "Old Aggie." Early in the year Jakeman, to fill the place of the late Allan Pond, was elected captain and under his able direction and that of Coach Gore, the squad soon rounded into shape. Daily practice was held as usual and dope talks were in order two evenings a week.

The first game of the season, with Colby, is worthy of comment, for, although our tally of runs was one less than theirs, it showed that our team could hit.

The Springfield game was lost through 4 infield hits, 3 errors, and a stolen base in a fast contest on Pratt Field. Except for the first inning, gilt-edged ball was pitched for M. A. C. We were unable to score, but the traditional Dewing scored on Newell's single. Batchelder did likewise in the following inning on Collin's single. Amherst came back with one run but was never able to tie the score. The struggle was replete with sensational plays and was marred only by an injury to Lent, who was hurt early in the game, and played to the last with a small bone in his leg broken.

Even though a large number of games were not won, the team played in a creditable manner throughout the season and did much to develop material that should make the coming season a banner year.

Hockey Season of 1921

CAPTAIN MCCARTHY

Beginning with a veteran squad, the hockey team of 1921 proved to be one of the speediest and cleverest septets yet turned out by the college. Although the schedule of games could not be played entirely, due to adverse weather conditions, enough were played so as to result in a satisfactory season. Eight contests, some of them against the fastest clubs in the country, brought the college wide publicity and wholesome respect.

MANAGER EVERS

Springfield Hockey Club was vanquished by an overwhelming score and the defeat at the hands of Amherst in 1920 was revenged when the Maroon and White triumphed in a thrilling game by the score of 2-1. Dartmouth was able to break the winning streak, but only after a ten-minute overtime period.

By far the most exciting and best played contest of the year was the clash with Harvard. For two periods the Crimson and Maroon and White played neck to neck, neither team being able to score. Finally, in the closing moments of the game, Harvard, by virtue of their better physical condition, was able to slip the puck twice through the well-guarded net. This was the closest game that the Crimson played, and as they won the intercollegiate hockey championship of the U. S., it was no mean achievement.

In this contest Captain McCarthy was at his best and time and again was down the ice on individual dashes. The Boston players picked "Jerry" as the best wing seen in action around the Hub so far this season.

The following back, defensive style of play, as used by the Aggies, broke up the far famed four-man dash of the Crimson forward line and rendered their attack well nigh worthless.

Fordham was able to down the Aggies in a spectacular third period end in the Ice Palace in New York City.

Tech and Boston College in the Boston Arena provided treats for the Hub Alumni and resulted in an even break. The Engineers were trimmed in a fast six-man game, the deciding goal being shot by Coach Mansell two minutes before the finish of the contest.

From a standpoint of offensive hockey and team play the Tufts clash stands out as the best playing of the year. Forward line and defense played their part in such a creditable manner that our Medford rivals were swamped to a tune of 8-0.

The rest of the season was a disappointment, warm weather and rain making it impossible to even matters with Dartmouth and Boston College. The forward line, comprising Capt. McCarthy, Coach Mansell, Lyons, and Snow played stellar hockey while the defensive work of Collins and Poole with Newell in the net made it almost impossible for opponents to tally. Credit is due Coach Mansell, who kept the squad going at top speed during the season.

The new rink built on the east side of the Freshman Field brought renewed enthusiasm and showed that this popular out-door game is regaining its old time prestige at Aggie.

The Season of 1921

CAPTAIN GOWDY

outpassed during the first period and half of the second, but finally won, through substitution of fresh men and rearrangement of their combination, by the score of 25 to 21.

In the Middlebury game the Aggie quintet was in fine form and showed as fine a defensive and passing game as was ever seen on the Vermonters' court. We were at no time in danger of losing after the first basket was caged.

The contest with Amherst was one of the most hotly contested and also one of the most peculiar of any ever played between the two institutions. The result was in doubt up to the very last whistle and the game was characterized by a large

At the opening of the 1921 basketball season, the squad had a nucleus of three "M" men, Captain Gowdy, Smith, and Thompson, and was reinforced by Roser, Marshman, Hale, and Ball. The season was started in the right way by winning the first game with Connecticut, and a fine brand of basketball was shown throughout the entire season regardless of whether the team won or lost. Although there were several defeats chalked up against the team, they were all by a small number of points, and the comparative excellence of the teams can not be judged entirely by the scores.

The game with the fast, heavier Harvard five is especially worthy of note, for it was replete with brilliant basketball. Harvard was outplayed and number of fouls. The passing of the Aggie team stood out as the redeeming feature of play, as on over fifty occasions they brought the ball to within shooting distance only to fail to score. Roser deserves credit for caging 19 fouls.

In the New Hampshire game the power of the old jinx remained unbroken, although the deciding score was not made until during the last thirty seconds of play. It was a clean, hard game throughout and was won by a good team. Smith, Roser, and Hale were the stars of the game. A foul which was shot during the last few seconds finally decided the winning team.

Probably the best game of the season to date was with the fast Worcester Tech five, rated as one of the best teams in the East. The game was replete with sensational plays, and our team never showed up to better advantage, for they played the game of their lives. As was the case in several previous games, a single goal scored just before the final whistle decided the score against us.

During the season up to date, the work of Captain Gowdy has been consistently of high grade. Smith, Roser, and Thompson have shown fine form, while Marshman is fast developing into a star. Since an unusually small percentage of the team will be lost by graduation this year, an especially good combination may be safely predicted for the coming season.

TRACK

Spring Track, Season of 1920

CAPTAIN MESERVE

The outdoor track season of 1920 opened with a larger number of candidates than in the previous season. The team's regular coach, Lawrence S. Dickinson '10, was on a leave of absence and the services of John H. Hubbard, Amherst '07, were secured. The fact that he began work a stranger to all the men, emphasizes the success which he accomplished in turning out a strong team by the end of the season. The team was led by Capt. "Tom" Meserve and had six letter men, and twenty-five more or less experienced candidates. The first meet, the Eastern Inter-Collegiates at Springfield, tested our strength. Aggie figured among the scorers, tying for seventh place with fifteen teams competing. Smith '22 scored third place in the broad jump, Sullivan '22 third in the "220", Lyons '20 fourth in the two mile, and Allen '21 and Woodworth '23 qualified for final heats in the "440" and the dashes respectively. The performances were slow on account of the muddy track and the heavy rain. The following meet, the New England Inter-Collegiates, was marred likewise by weather conditions but Aggie was credited with one point, Sullivan '22 fourth in the "220." The triangular meet with New Hampshire and Vermont, held at Burlington, resulted in third place for our team, which however succeeded in scoring ten of the eleven men who made the trip. The performances of Slate, Sullivan, and Dewing, and the exciting relay which closed the meet and gave the victory to New Hampshire, featured.

MANAGER GILBERT

Cross Country Season of 1920

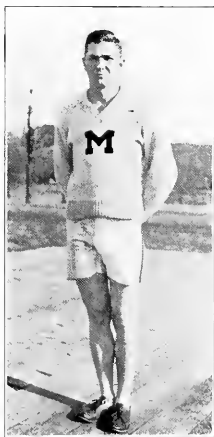

CAPTAIN SLATE

The cross country season of 1920 is regarded as one of the most successful M. A. C. has ever had in this line of sport. Starting with but three first-string veterans and a squad of twenty green candidates, Coach Dickinson rounded out a finished product which ranked well with other New England colleges. The first race, with W. P. I. on their own course, resulted in a 24-31 victory, with Captain Slate and Woodworth leading all the Worcester men to the line. Two weeks later we received a visit from New Hampshire's usually strong aggregation of harriers, and the dual over Prexy's Hill proved the closest of the season. The race was featured by many close finishes for positions, especially that by Captain Slate and Leath of New Hampshire, for first place, which went to the New Hampshire man. The visiting team proved the victor of the race by a margin of two points. At the New England Intercollegiates, Aggie finished seventh by a recount of points, which had originally placed her eleventh. The runners were hampered by a cold wind and colds contracted in practise. The following week they came back and defeated Springfield College on their own course by a decisive margin. Aggie scored men in the positions 1, 3, 4, 5, 6, which gave us the victory by a margin of fifteen points, and established a new record for the course. M. A. C.'s chief scorers for the season were Slate, Evers, and West, '21; Rollins '22; and Irish, MacCready, and Woodworth '23.

Relay Season of 1921

CAPTAIN GRAY

CAPTAIN GRAY

Board relay, which has always been among the most successful of Aggie activities in the past, came through a short but successful season. Handicapped by a lack of meets at which to display its material, the squad nevertheless had capabilities and accomplished its purpose. The chief object of Coach Dickinson was to put out a team which would turn the tables on the rivals who had for several years defeated us continually in all branches of sport. New Hampshire State. The morale of the team which had but one race was maintained by the importance of that race. The team practised at the increased distance of 440 yards as compared with 390 yards as in former years. The team which went to the Boston Arena February 5 was composed of Captain Gray '21, Slate '21, Allen '21, Sullivan '22, MacCready '23, and Woodworth '23. New Hampshire was defeated decisively at the Arena track, Aggie's first man opening up a lead and the team increasing its steadily throughout the race. The team composed of Sullivan, MacCready, Allen, and Woodworth ran the distance of 1852 yards in 3 minutes and 57 seconds, with New Hampshire forty yards in the rear. Slate, starting from the 25 yards mark in the mile handicap and running a well planned race, passed twenty-three opponents, finishing in second place, a performance which entitles him to a high rank among the leading college athletes. The success of Aggie track teams has been due in great measure to the loyal efforts of Coach L. S. Dickinson '10, whose work in upholding the standards of the college in this branch of sport has earned for him the respect of all.

RIFLE CLUB

won the Outdoor Trophy. This trophy is offered for the competition of all the agricultural colleges of the United States. Intercollegiate Rifle Association Rules govern all matches carried on here at Aggie.

The forthcoming season promises to be an excellent one. Although at present there is a slight misunderstanding as to the exact schedule of "shoots," it is quite evident that those "pulled off" will prove even more interesting than in previous years. With many of the old standbys still in college, men who have won their "M's" in the last two years, Aggie will have as fine a team as any New England college. The high records of these men augur well for the future season of Aggie's Rifle Club.

The Rifle Club has been instituted at Aggie for many years, creating a keen interest among large numbers of the students. Starting with a mere handful of supporters in its embryonic stage, the Club has grown, until now we find as large a number as fifty or sixty trying out each year.

The basis of selecting men to represent the college in shooting matches depends entirely on the individuality of the student. Each man is in reality a team in himself. Constant, untiring practise, steadiness, nerve control, and clear sighting are essential in securing the success of members of the team. The failure of one man to prove his worth at the crucial moment cannot be hidden by his team mates and will often lead to the loss of a match.

At present, Aggie is in the lead on two "long-time" matches. We have six wins thus far on the Indoor Trophy, the largest number that any college has attained. In addition, we have five times

The Tale of the Banquets

The Engagement with '21

It was the night before the Banquet Season. An ominous silence cloaked the campus, when the innocent little freshmen tucked in their snowy beds, relying explicitly on the good faith of the sophomores, suddenly found themselves betrayed. The sophisticated sophs, realizing that they were outnumbered nearly two to one, had laid elaborate preparations, had thrown all rules and regulations to the winds, and had begun hostilities 24 hours ahead of time. Equipped with several high-powered cars, and one or two immense trucks, about thirty pairs of handcuffs and several jugs of good old cider to keep up their morale, they sallied forth to the dastardly deed, which smacked of the wolf in the sheep fold. A systematic tour of the fraternity houses resulted in the capture of numerous, unsuspecting freshmen. Others were picked up in Dorms and surrounding houses. When the depleted ranks of freshmen finally gathered their scattered wits and fled far away from the violent scenes, it was to view with consternation and dismay their tattered ranks. The flower of their army was in the hands of the enemy. The sophs, flushed with victory and unstinted portions of cider, now made the grievous mistake of considering themselves victorious before the fight had really begun. Due to their laxity and rather stupid blunders, a goodly number of the freshmen who had been escorted to the wilds of Shutesbury escaped from the toils and scurried back to join their comrades, after a long, dark journey through the woods. At noontime, the Drill Hall, which had been elaborately arranged with stocks for the entire freshman class, presented the appearance of a desert isle, on which was marooned one lonely freshman.

At three in the afternoon the two forces met, the freshmen appearing on the rising ground above French Hall, while the sophs arrayed their puny forces upon the green at the base of the hill. With a wild whoop like so many Apache Indians, the freshmen swooped upon their prey. The fighting was short but terrific. The mighty men of the sophomores were trussed up in a trice. The triumphal procession to the Drill Hall began, and the now crestfallen sophs were nailed into their own stocks. Thus ended the first successful banquet season of the class of '22.

The Engagement with '23

The Chapel bell tolled midnight. The early evening had been clear, but a fog had gradually gathered which now added to the intense darkness of the campus. A few lights in South Dorm twinkled through the misty shades, but a silence—the silence of midnight—reigned. The last stroke of the Chapel bell, which had for a few fleeting seconds broken the midnight calm, died away. Apparently everything remained as before. Yet one who might have been passing the old Chapel at that hour, must have heard a slight scuffling noise which gradually increased in volume until the Chapel door flew open and the whole sophomore class burst out onto the campus in a bedlam of shouts and shrieks. Simultaneously the heavens were illumined by soaring skyrocket and the crack of pistols could be heard at different places over the campus. The Banquet Season was on!

The sophs now spread out, under the leadership of Captain Lewandowski, to comb the campus for the fleeing freshmen, who had been given some half hour's time in which to become ensconced in some safe retreat within the campus zone. Suddenly a shout was heard in the direction of the Drill Hall, and two figures were seen silhouetted against the black sky for a fleeting moment as they ducked under cover again. The Drill Hall immediately became the center of activity. After a short whirlwind scuffle the two freshmen were subdued, and the mob swept on to find the main yearling group. A skyrocket showing the direction the frosh had taken was sent up, and the whole party of sophs followed. For an hour they searched, covering the ground carefully. Wild rumors as to the maneuvers of the freshmen continually agitated the sophomore columns. At last the entire sophomore body, marching en masse over the hill back of the Cold Storage Plant, descried on the distant horizon across the valley their foes. A casual observer might have been reminded of the last stand of Harold, the King of the Saxons. The frightened frosh, huddled together like so many sheep, at times emitted a piping bleat which betrayed their intense agitation. This served to whet the appetites of the blood-thirsty sophs, and forming a rude phalanx behind a barrage of red fire and spitting rockets, they hurled themselves down the hill, across the valley, and threw themselves upon the freshmen. In an instant, the hillside was littered with hundreds of writhing bodies which emitted fierce grunts and shrieks of pain as twisted limbs and broken heads resulted from the fierce impact. The terrified frosh were now fighting with the fear of desperation. The burly sophs bestrode them, endeavoring to bind their hands and feet with thin wisps of twine, while numerous juniors and seniors, in a wild delirium, watched the gladiatorial combat much as the ancient Romans watched the fall of the combatants in the amphitheater. For a long hour the battle raged fiercely, but there was never any doubt as to its outcome. The wily sophs were abducting the freshmen from the field to waiting automobiles, and as the numbers of the frosh diminished, their spirits waned.

The field of conflict soon resolved itself into a jubilant body of victorious sophs, viewing with ill-concealed delight the prostrate freshmen trussed up like so many helpless porkers, awaiting the judgment of their superiors. Then began the march of the captives to the Drill Hall. In a short space of time, that place became an armed camp, with its huddled groups of tattered prisoners and its stalwart men of war marching about with ferocious frowns and malignant glances in the direction of the now completely broken freshmen. In a man-to-man struggle the freshmen had utterly failed, but their officers, led by the cunning Friend, had retreated to an impregnable position, where, although completely eliminated from the scene of the conflict, they remained concealed from the view of the sophs, thus escaping the annihilation which had befallen their less fortunate subsidiaries. To all intents and purposes, the fight was now over, with the sophs victorious, but the freshmen were permitted, by decree of the Senate, to hold their banquet, because their officers had escaped capture, and the sophs had forfeited the issue by the technicality of bringing automobiles into the zone. Thus endeth the history of the banquet scraps of 1922.
